

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

An electronic shop sales system having an article storage device and an electronic shop interconnected through a network communication line for selling an article to a user terminal connected to the network communication line from the electronic shop, wherein, upon receipt of an order of an article from the user terminal, a storage condition for the article is read from the article database, an environment controller of the article storage device is operated based on the storage condition to adjust the storage environment in an article container, the ordered article is stored in the article container, and the article is delivered to the user by way of the article storage device.

10